OIL IN EIGHT YEARS MADE $125,000,000 FOR ROCKEFELLER

Testimony of the New Jersey Corporation's Treasurer Shows that John D. Controls One-Quarter of All the Standard's Holdings.

Such a mass of evidence, gathered in most part from the lips of prominent officials of Standard Oil, tending to show the astounding millions earned by the trust and its immense combinations in America, Europe and Asia, that an opinion was freely expressed to-day that Federal Attorney Kellogg will have little trouble proving the Government's charge that the octopus is an illegal concern which exists in defiance of the United States laws.

At the end of the third day's inquiry Mr. Kellogg, by adroit and insistent interrogations, drew from Treasurer Wesley H. Tilford statements which, he believes, shows beyond any doubt that the present concern is in every essential the same corporation which was organized in 1882, and that not a change in the point of officers, shifting of stock, or system of attack on smaller concerns has been made.

Mr. Kellogg drew from Mr. Tilford a statement to the effect that John D. Rockefeller controlled 256,854 Trust certificates in March, 1892, and still held that amount of certificates in the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The present trust is represented by 972,500 shares of stock. Figuring that John D. Rockefeller owns more than one-fourth of this amount, his oil earnings in the last eight years have amounted to almost $125,000,000. The combined earnings of the Trust for the past eight years has been shown to have been very near a half a billion dollars.

Texas Law Defied. In reality no change in voting stock took place during the various stages of the Oil Trust Development. Mr. Tilford was not positive that the proportions of ownership of trust certificates in the days of dissolution was maintained under the agreement which gave birth to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, after this concern had taken over the twenty subsidiary companies. He admitted, however, that he had not lost in the transaction, and Mr. Kellogg seemed satisfied with the reply.

Mr. Kellogg went further and got the witness to admit that no important changes in the personnel of officers of the trust has been made from 1892 down to the present time.

Mr. Kellogg's line of inquiry was toward forcing the admission from Mr. Tilford that in reality no changes in the holders of stock, methods of conducting the monopoly and identity of directors has occurred in years and that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is in reality the combination of twenty companies, dominated and held by the same persons who owned the trust certificates in 1892.

Mr. Kellogg stated at the end of the first day's hearing that he would show the earnings of the octopus to be even greater than admitted. "Well, it is not a fact that, instead of $125,000,000, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey declared dividends to the amount of $22,000,000," asked Mr. Kellogg.

"I do not know," replied Mr. Tilford. "You are the treasurer and don't know, eh?" remarked Mr. Kellogg.

The inquirer then rapidly took the witness from the earliest days of the company through the days of liquidation. He forced Mr. Tilford one of the liquidating trustees, to admit that

KILLS GIRL WHO JILTED HIM AND TRIES SUICIDE

Harry Fischer Fires a Bullet Into Heart of Pretty Johanna Hoffman.

HIS OWN WOUND FATAL.

Tragedy Takes Place in Tenth Avenue Restaurant of the Girl's Uncle.

A prophetic current about Fifty-fifth street and Tenth avenue for weeks past that pretty Johanna Hoffman would be killed came true to-day at noon when Harry Fischer, a love-crazed baker, shot her through the heart and then put a bullet into his own brain. He is dying in Roosevelt Hospital.

The tragedy took place in the bakery and restaurant of Henry Fischer, at No. 32 Tenth avenue. Fischer is the uncle of Johanna Hoffman, who was an orphan, twenty-one years old and charmingly neat and attractive. She was a waitress in the little restaurant, which occupied the rear half of the store-room. The front is taken up with the bakery counters, spread with cakes and pies and rolls and loaves of bread.

Fell in Love with Girl.

Fischer secured employment in Fischer's bakery three years ago. Johanna was at school then and helped around the bakery and restaurant in the evenings. As the blonded into a beautiful young woman Fischer fell in love with her, but for a long time he kept his passion to himself.

Although the girl accepted his attentions, she did not love him and she told him so when he asked her to marry him. Fischer, the uncle, warned Fischer to cease courting Johanna and for a time it appeared that the baker had taken his rejection with good grace. Six months ago he renewed his suit. Johanna complained to her uncle, and Fischer was discharged. He had been boarding in the house at No. 32, above the bakery. After his discharge he moved to a furnished room at No. 32. He worked irregularly and spent much of his time around Fischer's restaurant, trying to talk to Johanna Hoffman.

The girl was friendly, but remained steadfast in her refusal to marry him. Fischer took to displaying a revolver in saloons about the neighborhood and proclaiming in his cups that if Johanna Hoffman did not marry him she would never marry any one else.

She Laughed at Threats.

No one took enough interest in the matter to interfere with Fischer. The girl when told of his threats laughed. She said she did not take them seriously. Fischer kept on nursing his hopeless love and drinking whiskey and contemplating revenge until what mentality he possessed became confused.

Miss Hoffman was sitting at the counter in the bakery last night when Fischer entered. He told her he had come for his final answer.

"This is the last time you will get a chance," he said, solemnly. "I ask you, will you marry me?" "Certainly not," replied the girl. "I have told you that I did not love you enough to marry you, and even if I did I would not marry contrary to the wishes of my uncle, who has been a father to me since I was a baby."

"All right, then," warned Fischer. "You will be sorry tomorrow."

Followed by the Slayer.

John Schaeffer went into the restaurant at noon to get some lunch. Miss Hoffman took his order and started back to the kitchen, where her aunt, Mrs. Fischer, was preparing the food. As she turned to walk to the rear of the store Fischer, who had been watching from the sidewalk, entered and followed her.

Schaeffer had no attention to Fischer.

In a moment he heard a shot. He turned, and at the door of the kitchen saw Fischer with a smoking pistol in his hand and Miss Hoffman staggering.

Mrs. Fischer ran to the kitchen door, and the wounded girl dropped into her arms murmuring, "Oh, aunt, I'm gone."

As she spoke Fischer, shooting with his left hand, fired a bullet into his own head and fell across one of the restaurant tables.

WOMAN DYING, SHOT BY ITALIAN BOY OF SIXTEEN

Police Say Tragedy Was Instigated by a Jealous Neighbor.

ARREST OTHER WOMAN.

Sister Declares Bad Blood Existed Between Prisoner and the Victim.

As she stepped to the door of her flat late this afternoon, on the fourth floor of the house at No. 115 Lafayette street, Mrs. Sophie Lombardi, thirty-two years old, was shot in the abdomen by a boy, who, the police say, was instigated to the crime by a jealous woman. Mrs. Lombardi was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital in a dying condition.

Frank Dominico, sixteen years old, the boy who lives on the fifth floor of the house, was arrested, charged with felonious assault. Raffaella Melazza, thirty-two years old, who also lives on the fourth floor, was arrested on the same charge.

According to the police the Melazza woman was jealous because of attentions her husband is alleged to have paid to the injured woman. On the other hand, Mrs. Lombardi is said to have been jealous of Mrs. Melazza.

During the afternoon the Melazza woman went to the flat of Mrs. Lombardi. The former is moving, because of the quarrel between the two families.

Mrs. Melazza, the police say, handed a revolver to Mrs. Lombardi, saying: "Please take care of this for me." Although surprised at the strange request, Mrs. Lombardi took the revolver. Just then, the police say, the Dominico boy approached and reached for the revolver. The boy took the weapon from Mrs. Lombardi's hand before she could stop him.

"Look out the gun will go off," cried the boy. At the same time the revolver did explode and Mrs. Lombardi fell to the floor with a groan. The bullet had entered her stomach.

Patrolmen Eaton and Duffy, of the Mulberry Street Station, heard the shot and ran into the house. The boy and Mrs. Melazza were still standing by the door.

Maculato Varo, a sister of the injured woman who lives in the same house, said that she and her husband had bad blood between the two families for a long time. Both women had fought a good deal, she said. She said that the Melazza woman had made open threats against her sister.

Will Not Be "Fooled."

The chief counsel for the commission declared emphatically that he would not be fooled and said that if his men had further trouble in securing what they wanted or in getting access to the police records they sought he would report the matter to Mr. Wilcox. Mr. Ivins was then heard to remark: "I am not going to delay it until Mr. Brown gets ready to come."

Mr. Cravath said:

"Give me your subpoena and I will see that they are brought here tomorrow."

Mr. Ivins wants to further examine D. C. Morehead, the Metropolitan Treasurer, who destroyed the books, and W. H. Brown, the auditor. Subpoena-servers have been unable to locate Mr. Morehead and Mr. Brown is said to be ill.

Mr. Ivins called on Mr. Cravath to state the position of the company immediately after Mr. Scudder had testified regarding the Quigg checks. Mr. Cravath said very mildly that the company was willing to produce all of the checks called for, and then followed an angry colloquy between the two lawyers.

Mr. Ivins declared that he had understood that Mr. Root was to be the chief witness to-day. He said that Mr. Brown was really ill from overwork and on the verge of a nervous collapse and wholly unable to appear. Mr. Brown is the general auditor.

Counsel in a Tilt.

Mr. Ivins then demanded that Mr. Morehead be produced, and he put on the stand Walter C. McNeill, an assistant to Mr. Scudder, who testified that he had seen Mr. Morehead about his office at various times to-day.

Mr. Ivins declared that it was inconceivable that there was any good reason for the absence of Mr. Morehead and insisted that there was a lot of "non-sense" about it.

At this Mr. Cravath sprang up and shouted: "There is no nonsense about it, and I take umbrage at the statement made by Mr. Ivins. It is an imputation upon me."

Mr. Ivins retorted: "That Mr. Morehead would be here now if the gentleman here (indicating counsel) wished him to be here."

Mr. Cravath said that some one had

LEMUEL E. QUIGG RECEIVED $4,500 FROM INTER.-MET.

Special Counsel for the Public Service Commission Says There Are More of Them and Wants Them Produced.

Checks amounting to $4,500, drawn by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company to the order of Lemuel Ely Quigg, and cashed by Mr. Quigg in October, November and December, 1902, figured in the Interborough-Metropolitan investigation before the Public Service Commission this afternoon.

William M. Ivins, special counsel for the commission, appeared to attach great importance to these checks, and inquired about more of them, which he insinuated had been given.

Three of the checks were for $1,000 each. One was for $1,500. They were charged on the Metropolitan books to the special construction account.

Mr. Quigg is a lawyer and politician who has much business to occupy his attention in Albany during the sessions of the Legislature.

The check matter was brought up during the examination of the first witness, Marvin Scudder, an accountant employed by Mr. Ivins to look into the Metropolitan's books. Mr. Scudder said that he had experienced some difficulty in getting hold of the canceled checks and had been unable to gain possession of others he had asked for.

Before the hearing began there was rather a spirited colloquy between William M. Ivins and Paul D. Cravath, evidently regarding the production of some statement or papers of some kind. Mr. Ivins protested against further delay and said that some one whose name was not understood had had ten days' notice.

Will Not Be "Fooled."

The chief counsel for the commission declared emphatically that he would not be fooled and said that if his men had further trouble in securing what they wanted or in getting access to the police records they sought he would report the matter to Mr. Wilcox.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The remarkable exodus of marriageable young women from this country to America and Canada is emphasized by the departure to-day of a thousand unmarried women, accompanied on the steamer Baltic alone, while several hundred more were among the total of 5,000 passengers carried on the three steamers which sailed to-day.

Another Dreadnought FOR THE BRITISH NAVY.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 19.—The plans of the Admiralty for a new and larger vessel of the Dreadnought class have been received at the construction department here, accompanied by orders to commence building the warship immediately. The displacement of the new vessel will be 19,300 tons, 800 tons greater than the Bellerophon and Generals, which were launched July 27 and Aug. 24 respectively.

The ship here will be launched before the one to be built at Devonport, orders for the construction of which were announced Sept. 18. The Devonport ship will have the same displacement of 19,300 tons, not 20,000 as at first reported.
